

Vitor Soares holds a bachelor's degree in physics from UNICAMP and is a technician in mechatronics. He started his career at CNPEM in 2011 where he had the opportunity to work on the Sirius project with the development and automation of several instruments such as an ultrasonic HLS and NEG deposition system before joining the Magnets group in 2015 to work on the development of magnetic characterization systems and has been involved in development of insertion devices since 2019.